REPRESENTATION

Members of the WA Redistricting Commission,

We seek fair and accountable political representation of communities of color through the 2011 redistricting process. With 27% of WA residents self-identifying as a person of color, and in greater concentrations in King County (35%), Pierce County (30%) and Yakima county (52%); our elected representatives should reflect the diversity of our state.

We urge you to create:

- 1) A new 10th congressional district in south King County that includes a majority of people of color;
- 2) A congressional district that includes Yakima and Tri-Cities;
- 3) Three legislative districts in King County that include a majority of people of color;
- 4) A legislative district in Pierce County that includes a majority of people of color; and
- 5) A legislative district in Yakima County that includes a majority of people of color.

The creation of these districts will have positive, long-lasting impacts for all WA residents by increasing the civic engagement and participation of underrepresented communities in the democratic process.

REPRESENTATION

Members of the WA Redistricting Commission,

We seek fair and accountable political representation of communities of color through the 2011 redistricting process. With 27% of WA residents self-identifying as a person of color, and in greater concentrations in King County (35%), Pierce County (30%) and Yakima county (52%); our elected representatives should reflect the diversity of our state.

We urge you to create:

- 1) A new 10th congressional district in south King County that includes a majority of people of color;
- 2) A congressional district that includes Yakima and Tri-Cities;
- 3) Three legislative districts in King County that include a majority of people of color;
- 4) A legislative district in Pierce County that includes a majority of people of color; and
- 5) A legislative district in Yakima County that includes a majority of people of color.

The creation of these districts will have positive, long-lasting impacts for all WA residents by increasing the civic engagement and participation of underrepresented communities in the democratic process.

REPRESENTATION

Members of the WA Redistricting Commission,

We seek fair and accountable political representation of communities of color through the 2011 redistricting process. With 27% of WA residents self-identifying as a person of color, and in greater concentrations in King County (35%), Pierce County (30%) and Yakima county (52%); our elected representatives should reflect the diversity of our state.

We urge you to create:

- 1) A new 10th congressional district in south King County that includes a majority of people of color;
- 2) A congressional district that includes Yakima and Tri-Cities;
- 3) Three legislative districts in King County that include a majority of people of color;
- 4) A legislative district in Pierce County that includes a majority of people of color; and
- 5) A legislative district in Yakima County that includes a majority of people of color.

The creation of these districts will have positive, long-lasting impacts for all WA residents by increasing the civic engagement and participation of underrepresented communities in the democratic process.

Members of the WA Redistricting Commission,

We seek fair and accountable political representation of communities of color through the 2011 redistricting process. With 27% of WA residents self-identifying as a person of color, and in greater concentrations in King County (35%), Pierce County (30%) and Yakima county (52%); our elected representatives should reflect the diversity of our state.

We urge you to create:

- 1) A new 10th congressional district in south King County that includes a majority of people of color;
- 2) A congressional district that includes Yakima and Tri-Cities;
- 3) Three legislative districts in King County that include a majority of people of color;
- 4) A legislative district in Pierce County that includes a majority of people of color; and
- 5) A legislative district in Yakima County that includes a majority of people of color.

The creation of these districts will have positive, long-lasting impacts for all WA residents by increasing the civic engagement and participation of underrepresented communities in the democratic process.

Sincerely,
